

Design your own healthy diet:

- Cut your calories by 10-20%
- Eat a balanced diet
- Take small frequent meals
- Switch 1-2 meals with seeds and fruits.
- Cut excess sugar and salt. Switch to healthy snacks

- Add millets to your daily diet. Switching to a multi-millet atta can be a game changer.
- Exercise regularly and make it a habit.
- Keep check on blood sugar levels, HbA1C and BP.
- With this diet, you will be able to lose weight without starving or altering sugar balance.
- Although it does not have the same effect on everyone, but you may achieve up to 4kgs of weight loss with this diet in 2 to 3 months.

Keep in mind

- This diet plan will control your blood sugar and lose some weight while bringing all the required nutrition to your platter.
- The focus is to plan up a diet plan that is low in carbs and sodium and loaded with some good protein and dietary fibres.
- It all depends on your age, gender, physical activity, and fitness goals. And yes, there is no single diet that can be deemed as a 'perfect one' for all people. So, the key here is to pick the best food options from the available food groups.
- Additionally, you may have to decrease the consumption of a certain food item while increasing your consumption of others. You also have to pay special attention to the portions and serving sizes.
- Even though being on a strict diet plan limit you to certain food types, you can still have the best tasting and nutritious meals with what you choose.
- Type 2 diabetes patients should take care to stay at their ideal weight. Losing weight faster may cause the blood sugar balance to deteriorate.
- Make sure to consult your physician before making any sudden changes in your daily calorie intake and for any customization. Our experts are always at your service.
- Foods with a high glycaemic index should be avoided. These foods cause blood sugar to rise.
- You can see that the results of the diet are much better if you exercise regularly.
